NEWS RELEASE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: December 2, 2013
CONTACT: Jim Philipps, 202.942.4220

NACo, county leaders hold national resiliency forum in Iowa

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The National Association of Counties (NACo) this week will hold a county leadership forum to share information and explore effective strategies to create more resilient communities which can recover faster and better from natural and man-made disaster.

The forum, “Resilient Counties: Leadership Amid Rapid Change,” will be held Dec. 5-6 in Linn County, Iowa. It is the first in a series of forums as part of NACo President Linda Langston’s resilient counties presidential initiative. The forum aims to help leaders in county government identify and prepare for potential threats, address short-term and long-term recovery needs in post-disaster situations and develop collaborative partnerships to address county resiliency.

The forum’s keynote speaker will be Ken Burris, chief executive officer of Witt O’Brien’s, a global leader in preparedness, crisis management and disaster response and recovery. Burris, the former chief operating officer of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), will highlight the important roles that counties play in building strong regional and national networks to prepare and respond to changing conditions. He also will share his experiences in managing response efforts including the 9/11 terrorist attacks, the Columbia shuttle disaster, Hurricane Katrina and the Deepwater Horizon oil spill.

Another featured speaker will be David Miller, FEMA’s associate administrator for the Federal Insurance and Mitigation Administration. He will discuss opportunities for county officials to be strong leaders in post-disaster situations and offered lessons from his experiences serving as the administrator of the Iowa Homeland Security and Emergency Management Division.

“The forum will be an informative exchange of ideas and real-world lessons learned and offered a unique opportunity to listen to national experts on how our county and community can become better prepared for disaster,” said Langston, supervisor, Linn County, Iowa.

Langston said many counties are on the front lines of coping with disasters such as hurricanes, forest fires, floods, tornadoes, earthquakes and economic disruptions.

“In order to remain healthy, vibrant, safe and economically competitive, America’s counties must be able to anticipate and adapt to all types of change,” she said. “As we learned in Linn County in the aftermath of the devastating 2008 floods, resilient communities recover faster and better. Fostering resilience at home makes for a stronger community and a thriving county.”

Panel discussions will include: “Leveraging Technology Tools to Prepare for Threats,” “Local Philanthropic and Economic Development Engagement in Recovery Efforts.” The full agenda is available here.

Support for the forum was provided by Colorado Counties, Inc., Idaho Association of Counties, Iowa State Association of Counties, Motorola Solutions Foundation, Rockwell Collins, Transamerica and Wisconsin Association of Counties.

###

The National Association of Counties (NACo) is the only national organization that represents county governments in the United States. Founded in 1935, NACo assists America’s 3,069 counties in pursuing excellence in public service to produce healthy, vibrant, safe and resilient counties. NACo promotes sound public policies, fosters county solutions and innovation, promotes intergovernmental and public-private collaboration and provides value-added services to save counties and taxpayers money. More information at: www.naco.org.