Pretrial Justice County Profile

Located on Colorado's western slope, Mesa County sits approximately 250 miles west of Denver, encompasses 3,300 square miles, and has an estimated population of 153,712. In 2012 the average daily population of the jail was 314, which is below its rated capacity of 392.

Implementation of Pretrial Reform

By implementing pretrial justice strategies proven to keep communities safe, Mesa County, avoided spending $1.5 million in 2012. The forecast for 2013 looks even better, with projected cost avoidance to be $2 million,¹ freeing up these funds for use by County Commissioners and executives to fund programs proven by research to be effective in reducing offender risk.

Jail crowding was the call to action for local criminal justice leaders. To address this challenge, Mesa County formed a governing collaborative, the Criminal Justice Leadership Group (CJLG), composed of County Commissioners, judges, the sheriff, the private and public bar and other stakeholders authorized to make policy changes to improve the criminal justice system. The CJLC has pursued a variety of system improvements using the National Institute of Corrections' Evidence-Based Decision Making model research findings to inform and guide decisions across the justice system. Predictable challenges have surfaced in the past, however Mesa County's strong collaborative policy environment has been the establishment through which 95,630 jail beds were saved in 2012.

Implementation of multiple pretrial justice strategies by the CJLG led to a significant decrease in the unnecessary use of jail beds for low risk defendants. This chart summarizes the essential elements of best practices in pretrial justice and illustrates the comprehensive nature of Mesa County's pretrial improvements.
