Big names vie for L.A. County supervisors' seats

By Charles Taylor

Folks in Los Angeles County are used to seeing big names on movie marquees — and even on statewide ballots (See: Schwarzenegger). But in a local race for county supervisor?

Such is the case in that rarest of occurrences: two open seats on the L.A. County Board of Supervisors, due to term-limited retirements.

The candidates — Bobby Shriver, a scion of the Kennedy clan and former mayor of Santa Monica; Sheila Kuelh, a Harvard-trained lawyer and longtime state lawmaker who once played Zelda Gilroy on the Dobie Gillis TV sitcom: and Hilda Solis, President Obama's first labor secretary and a former member of

Proposed 'Waters of U.S.' rule would hit county budgets

Comment period extended for WOUS rule

In a win for counties, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) announced on June 10 that the public comment period for the proposed rule on the "Definition of Waters of the United States Under the Clean Water Act" will be extended 91 days to Oct. 20. The proposed rule, as originally published in the Federal Register on April 21, was open for public comment for 90 days until July 21.

In early May, NACo, along with the U.S. Conference of Mayors (USCM) and National League of Cities (NLC), requested a 90-day extension of the public comment period. Because of the complexity of the proposal, the groups asked for an extension to allow sufficient time for local governments to analyze and comment on the proposed rule. A number of counties also sent extension requests.

In testimony before the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee's Subcommittee on Water Resources and the Environment, NACo representative Warren "Dusty" Williams, Riverside County, Calif., said EPA's proposed "Waters of the U.S." rule would significantly increase "county budgets and timelines" for infrastructure projects and could put public safety at risk.

The hearing, led by Chairman Bob Gibbs (R-Ohio) and Ranking Member Timothy H. Bishop (D-N.Y.), focused on the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) proposed rule, introduced earlier this year, that would amend the definition of "waters of the United States" within the Clean Water Act (CWA). It would dramatically expand the range of waters that fall under federal Williams said. "The cost of operations and maintenance for public infrastructure, such as existing flood damage-reduction systems, will also be increased and will take more time to accomplish than it should for an existing facility—potentially putting public safety at risk and increasing flood damages."

Williams, general manager and chief engineer for the Riverside's flood control and water conservation district, testified June 11 at the hearing. His testimony focused on the role counties and public agencies play in the Clean Water Act (CWA) regulatory scheme and outlined the proposal's potential problems for counties and public agencies.

For example, a roadside ditch under federal jurisdiction would be subject to the CWA Section 404 permit process, which can be extremely complex, time-consuming and expensive, leaving local governments and public agencies charged with public safety vulnerable to citizen suits.

Williams, who was also testifying on behalf of the National Association of Flood & Stormwater Management Agencies, spoke on the second panel and was joined by panelists representing the Western Governors' Association and Western States Water Council, the National Water Resources Association and Western Urban Water Coalition, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Association of Home Builders and the American Sustainable Business Council.

The proposed rule, published in the Federal Register, is open for public comment, until Oct. 20.

renewable energy sources, or energy efficiency programs as methods the state can use to meet its goals. The Administration estimates that by 2030, the rule would lead to a significant decrease in carbon emissions and result in climate and health benefits of $48 billion to $82 billion.

For each state, EPA has suggested a unique base emissions goal. This is based on current CO2 emissions, existing low- and zeroemitting power sources and other state and regional information. States then can set their own emission reduction goals using EPA's "building block" system.

There are four tenets to the "building block system:"

1. make fossil fuel power plants more efficient

CORRECTIONS

▶ Danielle Lindoff, local government specialist with the state of Alaska, was incorrectly identified as an Alaska Municipal League staffer in a photo that accompanied a story about a mobile workshop tour at WIR.

2. use more low-emitting power sources — i.e. natural gas, nuclear facilities

3. use more zero power sources i.e. renewable energy sources such as wind or solar, and

4. use electricity more efficiency. EPA acknowledges that the proposed rule is an unfunded mandate and could impose substantial direct compliance costs on state or local governments.

Within hours of release, Capitol Hill opponents had drafted bills to either limit or stop the regulations from moving forward. A number of industry groups have already raised issues about the proposal, stating that moving away from a traditional energy supply will raise energy costs for consumers. It is likely the issue may be passionately debated during the yearly appropriations cycle as an amendment, and numerous House and Senate Committees are expected to hold hearings on the proposal.

As part of the proposed rule package, a regulatory impact analysis (RIA) was also released that details the potential benefits, costs and economic impacts for regulating emissions from fossil-fuel power plants.

Illinois counties escape threat of climate change lawsuits

By CHARLES TAYLOR SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Lake. Will and several other Chicago-area counties may have dodged a bullet that was only a blank to begin with — ultimately an empty threat.

Farmers Insurance Co. recently withdrew class-action lawsuits it filed against nine counties — and nearly 200 municipalities — that blamed flood damages in 2013 on the counties' not doing enough to combat climate change. Defendants included Cook, DeKalb, DuPage, Kane, Kendall, LaSalle and McHenry counties.

"That's an appropriate and welcome development," said Daniel Jasica, an attorney in the Lake County state's attorney's office. basins, tributary enclosed sewers

"I thought they had a very steep and tributary open sewers/drains uphill battle to fight."

Farmers and Farmers Insurance Exchange had sought to recover unspecified property damage claims they paid to victims of widespread, severe flooding April 17 and 18, 2013. Damage from last year's spring floods in Cook and its "collar counties" resulted in federal payouts of more than $218 million in aid and low-interest loans to more than 64,000 households and individuals, according to the Illinois Emergency Management

The lawsuit stated: "The common, central and fundamental issue in this action is whether the Defendants have failed to safely operate retention basins, detention for the purpose of safely conveying storm water."

It also argued that because some localities have acknowledged potential impacts of climate change — Chicago, for instance, has a Climate Action Plan, adopted in 2008 — they should have been better prepared. The lawsuit against the county stated, "During the past 40 years, climate change in Cook County has caused rains to be of greater volume, greater intensity and greater duration than pre-1970 rainfall history evidenced."

The suit was always a longshot, at best, some experts say. Michael Gerrard, director of the Center for Climate Change Law at New York's Columbia Law School, said inadequate preparation on the part of municipalities would have been tough for Farmers to prove — because municipal liability for flood damages "tends to be very limited."

Further, added Jasica, Illinois law makes it difficult to hold municipalities liable for damages. That's due, in part, to the state's "public duty doctrine."

"There's a line of cases in Illinois that would suggest that while the county may owe a duty to try to prevent flooding and to develop rain water, that duty is owed not to any individual property owner

In the future, when infrastructure designed to protect against the effects of climate change fails, Gerrard also sees more litigation as possible — but with counties playing offense, not defense.

"I think we'll increasingly see counties as plaintiffs," he said. "I think that there will be cases where a county hires an architect and an engineer to design something, and a contractor to build it, and [if] it doesn't withstand a storm, there could be issues of professional proposed class action, he said. "It's liability about whether the facility should have been built stronger to withstand foreseeable events.

County stresses heroin addiction recovery following arrests

STAFF WRITER

Increases in heroin overdose deaths have prompted Bergen County, N.J. to favor rehabilitation measures and collaboration with the health department over its traditional prosecutorial approach.

The change hinges on a longerterm view on rehabilitation that eases penalties while residents battle addiction, but still uses the consequences stemming from their arrest to motivate them.

As of mid-June, Bergen County had already seen 17 heroin overdose deaths and was on track to top its 27 fatal overdoses in 2013.

"It's a crime, but we're not going to arrest our way out of it and hope the epidemic goes away," said Prosecutor John Molinelli. "It's not just about the urban zone where the dealers exist: it's the suburban area where people are addicted and dying."

Bergen (pop. 901,000) is a largely suburban county between New York City and Passiac County, N.J. where authorities say the drug trafficking, heroin specifically, is also strong. Through mid-June, Passaic County had registered 20 heroin overdose deaths.

"In a lot of the affluent parts of Bergen County, parents say there isn't a problem," said Nancy Mangieri, director of the county's Department of Health Services. "The arrest numbers tell us something different."

Undercover Bergen County police wait in Patterson, the Passaic County seat, for Bergen-registered cars that stop in the drug market, then follow them back and arrest the drivers. After processing them, police spend more time interviewing young-adult offenders about their drug histories, after which their parents are called. Most of those arrested are in their 20s; the average age is 24.

"We try to get a little intelligence on their heroin problem, how it got started," Molinelli said. "We talk to the kid and try to make them feel comfortable. We've gained a considerable amount of knowledge just asking questions and getting answers from them. Ninety percent said they'd been robbed by dealers. That isn't the kind of thing they'd call the police to report."

It's during the post-interview process that Bergen County's tactics change, Molinelli said. "Before, we'd hold them for indictment or downgrade them to municipal courts," he explained. "First-time offenders would be in a conditional dismissal program and their charges would be dismissed after six months if they stay out of trouble."

Now, all heroin cases are

Stafford County, Va. celebrates 350 years

By Christopher Johnson

EDITORIAL ASSISTANT

Stafford County, Va. was already 74 years old when sixyear-old George Washington moved there in 1738.

This year, the county is celebrating its 350th anniversary by looking back at its history in fun, unique ways.

"We have 350 years behind us to celebrate and our future is bright," said Board of Supervisors Chairman Jack Cavalier. "These events are the perfect opportunity to showcase why Stafford is a great place to live, work and play."

The 10th oldest county in Virginia, Stafford's history began along the Rappahannock and Potomac Rivers.

'Virginia Indians lived here in substantial numbers when Capt. John Smith sailed up the Potomac from Jamestown," said Stafford off with Celebrate Stafford 350! County historian Jerrilynn Eby. "Fisheries, tobacco plantations, iron works and flourmills were major suppliers to Great Britain during the Colonial period."

America's history. Pocahontas was kidnaped at Marlboro Point. Washington's family moved there in 1738. The future first president spent his formative years in Stafford until young adulthood.

The year-long celebration kicked in January. Attendees enjoyed ice skating, an interactive history tent that includes local historians and live entertainment from local talents.

The biggest event of the year -Named for the English county of Founders Day — included a parade, history square with historical figures nections to events that have shaped and historians as well as a fine arts festival during the two-day event in May. The parade lineup included the county high school marching bands, two World War II veterans, antique military vehicles, Miss Stafford County and a John Smith longboat replica. George Washington, who lived in Stafford County from age 6 to 19, also made an appearance.

One of the more interesting ideas that will run throughout the year is "Tell Your Stafford Story." This gives current and former residents of Stafford County the opportunity to tell their stories, which will then be stored and made accessible for future said Harry Crisp, chairman of countynews.org.

use by historians and researchers. The staff of the George Washington Foundation will help in recording with a set of prepared questions as a guide.

Videos and oral histories will be edited and made available on the George Washington Foundation, Central Rappahannock Regional Library and the Stafford 350 websites as well as the county's government cable channels. The project was launched on Washington's birthday in February.

"I think this is a terrific project,"

Stafford's 350th Anniversary Blue Ribbon Committee. "These stories will provide lasting value and great information and anecdotes about the county."

The county is also creating signs at 20 historical sites that are currently unmarked. They will highlight the historical event that took place at each location. Examples include George Mason's home, sites inhabited by Powhatan tribes and historic African-American churches.

Lastly, the county is working on a "Legacy Film" that will showcase Stafford's rich history, capturing the struggles, perseverance and accomplishments of its people.

"The goal is to provide a new understanding and appreciation among current residents and visitors to the county of the importance of Stafford's central role in American history," said Sue Henderson, program manager, Celebrate Stafford 350.

The 20-minute film will be distributed with 5,000 copies going to residents and educators by the end

"He has more money on hand than Sheila $Kuehl\,does, however, we\,don't\,know$ if other groups will weigh in on her behalf now that she's finished first. She may find her fundraising going through the roof."

There will also be a runoff for L.A. County sheriff, between the top two finishers in a field of seven. Because it's an open seat, Sonenshein said it's one of the most competitive races in 80 or 90 years.

"Usually, the Sheriff's Department in L.A. operates like a hereditary monarchy," he said. "The sheriff serves for maybe 20 years or so, grooms his successor, steps aside and eases the path for the successor who then serves another 20 years. So this is like the dynastic line running out of heirs.'

second-place candidate, who polled only 15 percent of the vote. If so, it would be the first time in a century that a sheriff was elected from outside the department, according to the Los Angeles Times.

Beyond L.A., statewide ballots included Propositions 41 and 42. Prop 42, according to California Choices.org, requires local government agencies, including counties, to comply with the state laws providing for public access to meetings of local government bodies and records of government officials.

The California State Association of Counties took no position on it, despite the fact that cities, counties, and school and special districts stood to lose "tens of millions of dollars annually" statewide, according to Jean Hurst, a CSAC lobbyist. L.A. County, the state's largest county, neither supported nor opposed it.

Proponents included the California Newspaper Publishers Association, the First Amendment Coalition and the League of Women Voters. Referred to the ballot by the Legislature, the measure had received unanimous support in the Assembly and Senate.

"There was a great concern about being viewed as against transparency and open government," Hurst said. "It's a very nuanced position to say, actually we're for that, we just want to get paid for it...."

While county boards remained silent, the state's association for county clerks strongly opposed the measure.

"The proponents of Prop 42 It would also eliminate the claim that the bill is about transparency. It's not. It's about money,' the California Association of Clerks and Election Officials wrote in an > Sonenshein called it a "motherhood and apple pie issue." "It's not worth the trouble," he added, given how little money local governments actually received from the state.

CSAC did endorse Proposition 41, also referred from the Legislature, the Veterans Housing and Homeless Prevention Bond Act of 2014, which cruised to victory with 61.5 percent of the vote. It authorizes $600 million in bonds to provide multifamily housing to a very large amount of California's low-income veterans and supportive housing for homeless vets.

Other election highlights included measures in three northern California counties on creating the breakaway State of Jefferson from rural counties who feel their interests are unrepresented in Sacramento.

Of the counties with Jefferson Tehama County approved Measure A, 56 percent to 44 percent, supporting the formation of the State of Jefferson. Del Norte's similar Measure A was voted down.

Siskiyou County's electorate faced a related but different question — an ordinance establishing analysis of the law's effects. "It's the Republic of Jefferson Territory percent to 44 percent.

Like similar movements in Colorado and Oregon, chances of creating a new state are slim, as it requires state legislative and federal approval.

Steve Boilard, a Cal State-Sacramento political analyst, said that while the movement stems from a "reasonable and legitimate" concern that the region has little political clout in Sacramento, "there is virtually no chance that the movement will succeed."

"The 'Jefferson' counties cover territory...but not a lot of its population," he wrote in an email to County News

But the Jefferson movement—or something like it — may not have breathed its last. A Silicon Valley 'gazillionaire" venture capitalist, Tim Draper, is largely bankrolling an effort to get a question on the Nov. 6 measures on the ballot, only voters in ballot that would divide California into six states, Hurst said.

> She wonders if the lukewarm reception in the heart of Jefferson movement counties will dissuade Draper from moving forward with what will be a heavy lift: gathering more than 800,000 signatures by sometime in July to get the six-state question on the ballot.

LUCC meets with Treasury's new Office of State and Local Finance

Renewal of MAP-21 was one of four core issues LUCC members raised in meetings and briefings with Obama Administration officials and leaders on Capitol Hill, including leaders of the Congressional Urban Caucus.

The gathering brought together more than a dozen urban county leaders to discuss pressing federal legislative priorities including threats to tax-exempt municipal bonds, support for the Marketplace Fairness Act and protection of the federal exemption for local property and income taxes.

Of special interest was a meeting with representatives from the two-month-old Office of State and Local Finance (OSLF) in the U.S. Treasury Department. Since its formation was announced in April, there's been speculation about its role and authority.

During their meeting, LUCC members learned that the office will serve as a single point of contact for counties and other local governments to inform federal policymakers on public finance issues. It will not have either statutory or regulatory powers, but will perform research and analysis. according to Gary Grippo, deputy assistant secretary for government financial policy at Treasury.

It will be a small operation, 10 staffers or fewer, who are in the process of being hired. The OSLF will not advocate for local governments, Grippo said, but will serve as a source for information. Former JP Morgan Managing Director Kent Hiteshew will be in charge, reporting to Matthew Rutherford, the Treasury's assistant secretary for financial markets.

"Because we have no stick, or statute, behind us, we have to rely on building good relationships," Grippo said. "What we do have is the convening power of the U.S. Treasury, and at the minimum we'll be able to call interested groups together and provide a forum."

They are (clockwise from right foreground) LUCC Chair Roy Brooks, Tarrant County, Texas; Peter McLaughlin, Hennepin County, Minn.; NACo Second Vice President Sallie Clark, El Paso County, Colo.; Toni Carter, Ramsey County, Minn.; and Jim Healy, DuPage County, Ill. Right photo: Ben Levine, policy analyst; Adam Chepenik, Office of State and Local Finance deputy director; and Gary Grippo, deputy assistant secretary for fiscal operations and policy at the U.S. Department of the Treasury.

He cited the passage and subsequent alteration of reforms to the National Flood Insurance Program as a situation in which the OSLF could have played a role in offering the local government perspective.

The office will focus on six primary issues:

- financially stressed entities
- infrastructure finance help work around obstacles to financing
- understanding state and local budget, fiscal and accounting matters, and how local government budget directors make budgetary tradeoffs
 - tax issues
- public pensions and
- the regulatory environment for municipal debt.

"We want to develop deep expertise in public finance, just as we have deep expertise in corporate finance," Grippo said. "It would be filling a knowledge hole on the federal side. Local representatives have a much different view on the nature of problems than the think tanks or the states.

"Our success depends on whether or not we add value," to the federal policy formation process, he added.

Counties look to change approach to indigent defense

IDAHO ASSOCIATION OF COUNTIES EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

DAVID J. CARROLL

SIXTH AMENDMENT CENTER

(Note: This is the second part in a two-part series)

Lessons from Idaho

Idaho is indicative of a countybased indigent defense system on the brink that is changing its approach. On March 26, Idaho Gov. law House Bill 542 beginning the process of shifting more and more responsibilities for the oversight of indigent defense services to the state.

Specifically, the new law bans the use of flat-fee contracting and creates a state-funded, statewide commission with the authority to set standards for the delivery of indigent defense services and to immediately begin addressing the lack of public defense training throughout the state. The new commission also data-collection requirements.

The journey to having the state pick up more and more responsibility for indigent defense services is one that started several years ago when the ACLU was suing several Montana counties, and their Idaho counterparts felt they may be next since indigent defense in Idaho looked much like Montana's.

The Idaho Criminal Justice Commission (ICJC), a 25-member commission of criminal justice stakeholders, was created by executive order of the governor.

It includes prosecutors, judges, C.L. "Butch" Otter (R) signed into law enforcement, defense counsel, a county association representative, legislators and state executive branch representatives, among others, who meet regularly to collaborate and devise best practices to achieve a "safer Idaho." An ICJCcommissioned study determined that the state did, indeed, have a Sixth Amendment crisis.

> In response, the ICJC first proposed three pieces of legislation that were adopted by the Idaho Legislature and signed into law substantive issues related to public defense commission. That is, if the tions in perpetuity, while the state defense. Some of these issues included clarifying when a defendant is entitled to counsel and how to determine whether a defendant is indigent.

However, much was left undone. Therefore, the ICJC proposed that a legislative interim committee study the problem and make recommendations to rectify the crisis.

The concurrent resolution creating the interim committee identified numerous systemic deficiencies in the delivery of the right to counsel

After working throughout the summer and fall of 2013, the interim committee proposed the parameters of what became H.B. 542. Yet there was still a problem.

Over the course of 2013, the Legislative Interim Committee heard testimony from a number of groups (prosecutors, judges, etc.) which suggested that indigent defense services should remain county-funded and county administered.

This presented a difficulty regarding how to enforce the stanhas authority to promulgate binding by the governor to address several dards promulgated by the public binding standards?

On Feb. 5, the Idaho Association of Counties (IAC) met to discuss these issues and ultimately concluded that the best policy for Idaho all on its own. Other states should power over the right to counsel from local level.

Instead, IAC adopted a policy state the power to enforce standards and administer the system at the state level, in exchange for capping county costs at their current Deutch (R-Fla.) entered a bill to spending levels.

Currently, Idaho's counties collectively spend approximately $22 million annually on indigent defense, with an estimated $10 million-$15 million needed to have the system come into compliance with constitutional adequacy.

Under this proposal, the state also does not have to come up with $32 million-$37 million for the system was to remove decision-making consider emulating this process as a way forward.

Even as counties struggle to get state government to take responsiresolution that would cede to the bility for the right to counsel, there is a movement to get more federal help as well.

> On Oct. 30, 2013, U.S. Rep. Ted create a federally funded National Center for the Right to Counsel to aid states and counties in meeting their constitutional obligations under the U.S. Supreme Court's 1963 Gideon v. Wainwright decision.

High court issues qualified immunity rulings favorable to counties

By LISA SORONEN

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

STATE AND LOCAL LEGAL CENTER

The U.S. Supreme Court has issued two opinions favoring counties in qualified immunity cases. Qualified immunity protects government officials from lawsuits claiming violation of an individual's constitutional rights when the law they are accused of violating isn't "clearly established."

Deadly Force High-speed Chase

In Plumhoff v. Rickard the court held 7-2 that police officers didn't violate the Fourth Amendment when they shot and killed the driver of a fleeing vehicle to end a dangerous car chase. The court also unanimously concluded the officers were entitled to qualified immunity.

Donald Rickard drove away after being pulled over because his vehicle had only one operating headlight and was pursued by police. He drove over 100 miles an hour and passed more than two dozen vehicles before exiting the highway where he made contact with three police cars. Rickard's tires were spinning and his car was rocking back and apply qualified immunity. The court three shots into his car. Rickard then reversed his car, nearly hitting an officer on foot, and again fled. Officers fired 12 more shots killing Rickard and his passenger.

Rickard's surviving daughter argued that the Fourth Amendment did not allow the police to use deadly force to end the chase and that even if police were permitted to fire their weapons, they fired too many shots.

The court disagreed concluding the use of deadly force was reasonable because "[u]nder the circumstances at the moment when the shots were fired, all that a reasonable police officer could have concluded was that Rickard was intent on resuming his flight and that, if he was allowed to do so. he would once again pose a deadly threat for others on the road."

The number of shots wasn't unreasonable because "if police officers are justified in firing at a suspect in order to end a severe threat to public safety, the officers need not stop shooting until the threat has ended.'

The State and Local Legal Center's (SLLC) amicus brief argued that the lower court failed to properly forth when Officer Plumhoff fired noted that the lower court "said nothing about whether the officers violated clearly established law," when denying the officers qualified RESILIENCE from page 7 immunity.

Viewpoint Discrimination When Moving Protesters

In Wood v. Moss, the court unanimously granted qualified immunity to two Secret Service agents who had moved anti-Bush protesters a block further from the president than pro-Bush supporters.

Pro- and anti-George W. Bush demonstrators had assembled on opposite sides of a street in Jacksonville, Ore., on which President Bush's motorcade was supposed to travel to take him to a cottage for the evening. The president made a last-minute decision to have dinner at the outdoor patio dining area of the Jacksonville Inn.

Learning of the route change, protesters moved down the street in front of the Inn. Secret Service agents moved them two blocks down the street, about a block further away from the Inn than the supporters. The anti-Bush protesters sued two Secret Service agents

Vhat's in a Seal?	STRUCK COUNTY
urrituck County, N.C. ww.dunncountywi.govoffice2.com	1668

A coastal county, Currituck was established in 1668 as one of the first Colonial ports to North Carolina. Resting at the northern tip of the Outer Banks, the county is surrounded by the Currituck Sound, Albermarle Sound and the Atlantic Ocean.

"Currituck" is an Indian term which means "land of the wild geese," and the term serves its purpose because several wildlife refuges exist throughout the county, including the Currituck National Wildlife Refuge.

The native Yeopim and Pasquotank were the first Native Americans to live in this Outer Banks region. The natives moved to the east as European settlers, the English and French Huguenots, started to populate present-day Currituck County. Settlers established several fishing communities and by the year of the Revolution, the county had both a courthouse and a jail. The county's greatest landmarks remain these original structures.

During the late 19th century, sportsmen and other outdoor enthusiasts toured Currituck, and it soon became a hunting and fishing oasis to the wealthy families in the eastern United States.

The seal shows a wild goose along the outer banks with the Currituck Beach Lighthouse in the background.

ALABAMA WYOMING

What issues are driving state associations' legislative agendas? What are the latest and most persistent challenges your county colleagues in other states are facing? What looks to be looming on the horizon?

State-to-State, a County News feature, explores these questions and helps keep you in touch with your fellow leaders across the country.

Alabama

Scarred by tornadoes and generally aching for revenue, Alabama's counties managed a few victories in the Legislature this year. Association of County Commissions of Alabama Executive Director Sonny Brasfield said he counted eight significant pieces of legislation that would help the counties, starting with the state income tax refund take back.

One will allow counties to intercept state income tax refunds to residents who owe debts to the

"We're working on implementing that; it's going to be good to Commissions from amending legbe able to capture those debts," Brasfield said.

Alabama's counties have limited the Legislature's approval, "and the state is so conservative, people won't stand for counties using what powers they do have," Brasfield said.

One bill that did not pass the Legislature would have relaxed a 1901 restriction that keeps County and county employees.

islation after it has been introduced or advertised.

"That really holds back our means of raising revenue without commissions, but we're hoping to have more success with that in 2015.

> In January, a board appointed by the state association of counties and the league of municipalities will take charge of managing health insurance for more than 60,000 city claiming their First Amendment right to be free from viewpoint discrimination had been violated. The qualified immunity.

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg officers in this case were entitled to qualified immunity: "No [past] decision of this court so much as hinted that their on-the-spot action was unlawful because they failed to keep the protesters and supporters, throughout the episode, equidistant from the president."

Street View. What the justices would discover there is a parking lot adjacent to the Jacksonville Inn's outdoor patio, which the anti-Bush protesters would have had direct agents claimed they were entitled to access to had they not been moved two blocks away.

Pro-Bush demonstrators had no had little trouble concluding the direct access to the inn where they were gathered because the side of the inn they were facing was totally blocked by another building. The court observed these geographic features when concluding that the agents had a security-based rationale for moving the anti-Bush protesters out of weapons range of the president.

The State and Local Legal Center aged the court to tour downtown (SLLC) filed amicus briefs in both

"We wanted that out of our concern for the Affordable Care Act." he said. "We were a little uncomfortable with the challenges with the federal legislation."

Infrastructure is also a concern. County roads are taking a beating thanks to the recent influx of automobile manufacturers.

'We've joked that we're the Detroit of the south," Brasfield said. "The difference here is that they're all in unincorporated areas, so it's a safe and maintained rural road system a challenge."

A$1.2billionGARVEEbondfor city and county road construction will help, with 77 percent going to counties. It will fund 800 separate county road projects, Brasfield said, but the challenge will be getting them all out to bid in 30 months. It's the largest road and bridge construction program in the state's history.

The Legislature may finally put money into a statewide fund to pay claims from governmental and other public claims after disasters. "We've had a program since 2008, but we've never been able to fund it," he said.

County representatives are also meeting with a state prison reform committee, which will directly impact the population of county jails. The state prison system is at double capacity.

Wyoming

If only this were the case for counties in every state. In Wyoming, the governor is a big fan of local government. Such a strong supporter, in fact, that he recommended a substantial increase in state funding for counties as the Legislature held its budget session, which ended in March.

Not unsurprisingly, the Wyoming County Commissioners Association (WCCA) worked very hard to ensure the governor's recommendation cleared the Legislature, and they were ultimately successful. WCCA Executive Pete Obermueller said.

Looking ahead to the next legislative session, WCCA is very involved in developing language in committee-sponsored bills to capture 911 fees from prepaid wireless users. The issue is especially important to counties, since they, sometimes in partnership with cities, run Wyoming's entire 911 system. The state has no centralized 911 coordinator.

Finally, energy is the top industry in Wyoming by a long shot. Over time, Wyoming's mineral valuation and taxation process has become overly complicated, Obermueller said. The WCCA is actively engaged with several stakeholders streamline the state's mineral taxation to ease industry burden while maintaining local government revenue sources.

As WCCA scouts for challenges making the charge of maintaining and opportunities at the state legislative level, it does so against an always-present backdrop of federal land ownership.

> Wyoming is nearly half owned by the federal government. There are counties in Wyoming that are 60, 70, 80, even 90 percent federally owned.

WCCA works on for counties in tions on coal, and to educate the Wyoming, Obermueller said. From PILT, to grazing, to recreation, to energy development and environmental stewardship, counties rely on their federal partners to be good faith negotiators and actors. "Until such time as Wyoming is granted its land (an unlikely event), the work of building and maintaining local decision-making on public lands will never end," he observed.

More immediately, counties in an attempt to simplify and in Wyoming fear the Obama Administration's continued efforts to hamstring the production and use of coal. About 40 percent of the nation's energy comes from coal, and about 40 percent of that coal comes from one county (Campbell) in Wyoming, Obermueller said.

> "We support all energy sources, but it is a simple reality that replacing coal is impossible without drastic economic impacts on consumers and manufacturers.

The WCCA is actively working to push back on EPA regulations This fact colors nearly everything that seek to place unrealistic restricpublic on the mining and use of coal.

SOLUTIONS SPOTLIGHT

Effective Public & Private Sector Partnerships

Objective

The Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health (LACDMH) is the largest countyoperated mental health department in the United States, directly operating 80 program sites and more than 47 co-located sites. Each year, it contracts with approximately 600 agencies and individual practitioners to provide a spectrum of mental health services to more than 270,000 residents of all ages.

LACDMH sought to launch an integrated comprehensive behavioral health clinical, administrative and financial information system to coordinate behavioral health services for a county with a population of nearly 10 million.

Solution

LACDMH selected Netsmart, a NACo premier partner, and leading knowledge and technology partner to nearly 500 counties nationwide, to implement the Integrated Behavioral Health Information System (IBHIS). The IBHIS is a state-of-theart IT system consistent with LACDMH's requirements to support multiple simultaneous users and interface with several existing and planned county information systems. The IBHIS also enables the demonstration of Meaningful Use of a Certified Electronic Health Record (EHR), creating an opportunity to pursue incentive payments under the HITECH Act, enacted as part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment

"The system allows us to apply the most advanced technology to support the work and partnerships that create hope, wellness and recovery in the lives of clients and their families," said LACDMH Director Marvin Southard, D.S.W.

The IBHIS is hosted by Netsmart in its SSAE16-Certified data center with full redundancy, security, back-up and system reli-

In addition, Netsmart developed LACDMH Essentials, an electronic health record (EHR) package specifically for contract behavioral health providers in the County of Los Angeles. Based on the Netsmart myAvatar CareRecord, LACDMH Essentials uses the county's well-defined requirements as the baseline for its features and functions. It gives providers a pre-configured system that uses the electronic data exchange mechanisms established by IBHIS, and includes the clinical forms required by the county for providers. By pre-configuring the system, implementation time is minimized, providing a lower cost of ownership for contract providers.

Continuing over the next severalmonths, more than 3,000 clinicians in the county's directly operated programs will use the Netsmart myAvatar CareRecord as the county's EHR.

In addition, the IBHIS project includes new integration methodologies that facilitate electronic exchange of administrative and billing information to support the county's more than 600 contract providers. This interoperability solution will allow the contract providers to fully adopt health information technology and improve efficiencies by eliminating the need to manually enter client information into multiple electronic health

With the full implementation of IBHIS, both county staff and contract providers will use IBHIS information in real time, providing coordinated care through instant access to comprehensive authorized health record information.

►ALABAMA

A judge ruled that the federal government does not have to pay for the lawyers that argued SHELBY COUNTY's side in a U.S. Supreme Court case that struck down part of the Voting Rights Act.

The case had challenged the Voting Rights Act's formula that was used to determine which parts of the country needed to get pre-approval from the Justice Department before making any changes to their election procedures. The county lost the case in two lower courts before prevailing at the Supreme Court and the county's legal team billed more than $2.4 million.

The law firm that represented the county appealed the decision, according to the Montgomery Observer.

►CALIFORNIA

• ALAMEDA COUNTY voters passed a measure that will raise an expected $100 million a year to pay for health clinics for illegal immigrants under the state's Medi-Cal program. Those immigrants are excluded from state programs and the federal Affordable Care Act.

Reuters reported that the 0.5 percent sales tax to fund the clinics has been extended to 2034 from its previous sunset in 2019. This will provide treatment to roughly 50,000 undocumented residents at the clinics.

• Renewable energy produced by Marin Clean Energy will likely course through wires spanning unincorporated NAPA COUNTY.

If the California Public Utilities Commission approves the agreement this summer, 16,000 residential and commercial power customers would switch over to the program's renewable energy power supplies by the start of 2015, unless they choose to opt out and remain Pacific Gas & Electric customers

The MARIN COUNTY-based energy concern provides power packages of 50 percent to 100 percent renewable energy to an existing base of 125,000 customers in Marin County and the city of Richmond. Participation in the program is strictly voluntary; the charge for being an MCE customer appears as a line on PG&E bills.

Energy study, participation by unincorporated Napa County could lead to a 3 percent decrease in the rates MCE charges, the Napa Valley Register reported.

only once a year, like birthdays, anniversaries and the Fourth of July. And regardless of how busy we are, we find time to organize and observe these special events. Why isn't this the case with retirement planning?

For many of us, retirement will only happen once in a lifetime, and it's one of the most significant milestones in our lives. It will change how, and perhaps where, we'll spend our everyday lives. Making sure that you're investing enough money in your deferred comp plan today is important, because that income has to help support you for the remainder of your lifetime. Here are some good first steps:

The king's departure has been attributed to ill health or family and personal scandal or reduced popularity of the monarchy. The abdicating itself but whether the king himself stated that he wanted a new generation to take over—one with more vigor and new ideas. Prior to that there was the abdication of Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands also citing the action as the right time for a new generation to take over.

There are basically two dictionary meanings to the word abdicate. The first is the idea of giving up an a term in office in which the lives office — usually the throne of a country. It might also mean resign or retire from office. The second meaning refers to an action a person might take, whether formal or not, to avoid or evade a responsibility such as a person's...abdicating responsibility as a parent by not showing up in the life of a child.

KING COUNTY Executive Dow Constantine has proposed legislation to ensure customer and driver safety in the growing industry of transportation network companies (TNC), which naco.org or cban@naco.org.)

includes services such as Lyft, Sidecar and Uber.

The proposed ordinance contains minimum operating requirements for TNCs and requires that TNC drivers follow the same driver licensing requirements—including driver training, testing and insurance standards — that apply to for-hire and taxi drivers.

"Innovation is driving rapid changes in the transportation forhire industry," Constantine said. "It is reasonable to expect that drivers in these programs are properly insured and operating safe vehicles."

In addition to treating TNC drivers as "for-hire" drivers under King County code, the proposed ordinance explicitly allows the use of technology innovation across the industry.

The measure must be approved by the County Council.

Don't Let EPA Put Your County

Earlier this year, EPA and the Corps of Engineers released a proposed rule -Definition of Waters of the U.S. Under the Clean Water Act – that would dramatically expand the range of waters that fall under federal regulation.

As drafted, the proposal would modify regulations that have been in place for more than 25 years and eliminate the distinction between bodies of water like rivers and lakes — and roadside ditches and drains.

NACo has built a new Web portal www.naco.org/wous — to give you a clear view of the rule's impact. You will find:

- NACo's Analysis of the Proposed Rule & Impacts to Counties
- Policy Briefs & Comparison Charts
- Action Items for County Officials, such as
 - o Extension of commenting period
 - o Sample county resolutions
 - o Sample comments
 - o Drafting an Op-Ed
 - o Contacting your Member of Congress

As requested by NACo, the U.S. Conference of Mayors (USCM) and National League of Cities (NLC), the public comment period has been extended for an additional 91 days, pushing the deadline to Oct. 20 from July 21.
