

INTRODUCTION AND COUNTY ROLE IN IMMIGRATION

Congress has debated comprehensive immigration reform for almost a decade, balancing the need to reform the immigration system with increased border security concerns. In the debate over immigration reform, the county perspective is often overlooked; yet, from an operational and managerial standpoint, counties are central players. As administrators of numerous federal benefits programs and front-line providers of the public's health and safety, counties continue to be impacted directly by federal immigration policies and practices.

- Community and public health: Nationally, counties invest $83 billion annually in community health for more than 300 million residents nationwide. Through 961 public county hospitals, 883 county-owned and supported long-term care facilities, 750 county behavioral health authorities and 1,943 county public health departments, counties deliver health services to millions of individuals. From preventative measures like administering flu shots to educating the public on health issues and other diseases, counties are involved in protecting the health of all communities across the country. Often serving as the health care providers of last resort for the uninsured and underinsured, counties provide health care to our nation's residents, regardless of immigration status, as mandated by federal and state laws and policies.
- Law enforcement and community safety: Maintaining safe communities is one of the most important functions of county governments. Counties invest over $70 billion annually in providing justice and public safety services to all residents, working together with all levels of government to improve public safety, safely reduce jail populations and fight recidivism. Additionally, counties are often involved in the apprehension and detention of undocumented immigrants at the request of our federal agency partners.
- Local social safety-net providers: Counties fund and administer federal, state and local service systems and play a pivotal role in providing all residents with critical human services to break cycles of poverty. Each year, counties invest $58 billion in federal, state and local funds in human services while serving as the front-line social safety net for residents.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION ON THE WORK OF NACo's IMMIGRATION REFORM TASK FORCE

Given the central role of county governments in ensuring the health and safety of all members of local communities, county leaders are important stakeholders in discussions related to federal immigration policies. The National Association of Counties' (NACo) Immigration Reform Task Force provides a forum for county officials from across the nation to discuss the impact of federal immigration policy on local governments and communities, and to engage with federal decision makers on matters related to immigration. The Task Force is also charged with advising NACo's ten policy steering committees on federal immigration issues.

To carry out this objective of informing NACo's policy steering committees, in 2018 and 2019, NACo's Immigration Reform Task Force worked in a bipartisan manner to develop immigration consensus principles. Once agreed to, Task Force members then translated these principles into actionable policy resolutions through NACo's comprehensive policy process.

At the 2019 Legislative Conference, NACo's ten policy steering committees and Board of Directors considered and adopted the following policies, which are valid until NACo's Annual Conference in July 2019.

NACo POLICY ON IMMIGRATION

These policies were adopted at the NACo 2019 Legislative Conference and serve as interim policy until the NACo 2019 Annual Conference in July.

Comprehensive Immigration Reform

Although immigration is a federal responsibility, inaction by Congress and shifting federal administrative policies have created confusion and uncertainty for county governments, who must provide for the well-being and safety of all members of our communities, including immigrant populations.

NACo policy: NACo calls on Congress to put aside political differences and urgently come to agreement on meaningful immigration legislation that provides clarity at the local level and helps counties work with federal partners on immigration issues while serving the needs of all residents (pg. 104 of NACo's American County Platform).

Workforce and the Economy

Immigrants largely come to America seeking opportunity, and immigrant labor and expertise is vital to local economies and industries in most states across the country. Counties have an interest in ensuring that our employers and industries of all types can hire and retain a qualified and legal workforce that meets our needs and helps to strengthen local economies.

NACo policy: Federal laws should not only maintain legal immigration levels, but also support and provide legal avenues for immigrants who wish to come to the United States and allow these individuals to contribute their skills and expertise to our economies and to maintain a sufficient workforce (pg. 2 of NACo's Interim Policy Resolutions Packet).

Supportive Services and Resident Well-Being

Counties across the nation fund and administer federal, state and local programs that support the health and successful development of all residents, including immigrant populations. Federal immigration policies that impact families or children can unintentionally affect the ability of counties to provide supportive services to residents, often resulting in additional strain to local budgets.

NACo policy: Counties urge the federal government to carry out its enforcement of immigration law in a manner that minimizes negative impacts on families and children and does not increase reliance on local social safety-net services or create new demands and administrative costs for counties (pg. 6 of NACo's Interim Policy Resolutions Packet).
