The Criminal Justice Population &

ACCESS TO HEALTHCARE IN SALT LAKE COUNTY
Current Connections & Programming as a Non-Expansion State

Planning Efforts Towards Expansion

Details released late yesterday on the “Utah Access Plus” Framework

Special Session late October?

Our county previously expressed formal support for the Governor’s Healthy Utah Plan, largely due to the opportunities afforded to the criminal justice system.
The majority of incarcerated individuals will be released at some point in time.

An offender’s ability to access physical health and behavioral health services reduces recidivism, increases public safety, and allows individuals to become tax payers rather than users of tax funds.

“When someone gets discharged from the jail and they don’t have insurance and they don’t have a plan, we can pretty much set our watch to when we’re going see them again,” said Ben Breit, a spokesman for the Cook County Sheriff’s Office. Impacts to Inmates Under a Full Expansion Scenario

Under a full Medicaid Expansion scenario:
• Salt Lake County estimates a transition from 20% to 87% Medicaid Eligible in our jail.
• Prisons are expected to have a higher number of Medicaid Eligible individuals under an expansion scenario, due to the longer length of stays.
Pre-ACA Approximately 90% of individuals entering county jails are uninsured. Most are non-parenting, low-income and currently not covered by Medicaid.

Approximately 35% of the Optional Expansion have Criminal Justice History.

3,800 uninsured veterans (and 1000 spouses) would qualify for Medicaid Expansion should our state adopt.

Message from Mayor Ben McAdams

The Affordable Care Act – also known as healthcare reform—sets out new requirements and resources for consumers so that they can help navigate the changing health insurance coverage system. Surveys show that many Utahns are unsure about the new law and how they can find reliable, accurate information. Healthcare reform seeks to expand coverage. But achieving that goal depends on consumers’ ability to effectively participate in health coverage in ways that have been unavailable until now.

With this website, I hope we can help you with answers to questions such as:

› How can I find coverage?
› What will it cost?
› When will I see the benefits?

Health care is a very personal issue that touches all our lives. My hope is that the information available here assists you and your family in making the best possible choice for you.
